Mrs Gohla Meir, the Israell Prime Minister, who is now on holidoy, hus let it be known through the Government press office that she wants the Knesset Interior Committee to take up the Bill for Chief Rabbinate elections they can be beld soon.

However, Mr Mordecai Surkiss the committee's chalrman, is in no hurry to press ahead with discus-sion of the Bill, and he cannot ace it coming up in his committee for several weeks.

He has mode little secret of the fact that he is purposely delaying the Bill becouse of religious oppo silion to his own favoured messure for electing Israel's moyors by direct vote instead of on porty

The National Religious Party is feerful that it will lose a number of prestigious offices If mayors are directly elected.

It seems likely that orroage menta for Chief Rabbinate cleetions will not be completed before the current extension to their term of offica expirea oo January 31 1972, and It is almost a certeioty that the two aged Chlef Rabbls—Rabbl I. J. Unterman (Ashkenazi) and Rebbl Itzhek Nissim (Sepbardi)—will be given yet another axtended term of office, which will take them well into 1972.

The Other Enemy

Even while a precarious cease-fire holds along the Suez Canal, and we pray that the New Year may bring true peace, Israel is engaged in a forgotten war. It is the relentless war against the other enemy.

It is the war against poverty, slum housing, overcrowded hospitals... The struggle to raise the living standard of the underprivileged... The fight to maintain welfare services, care for the orphaned, the aged and the sick.

It is a war that could affect Israel's morale ... the morale of the soldier along the Suez Canal, on the Golan Heights and in the Sinai desert.

It is this war that will determine Israel's future, it is a war that Israel must not lose.

It is a war in which every Jew must play a part.

Give responsibly.

AN ISRAEL! AT THE COURT OF ST. JAMES'S. By Hanoch Bartov, Veilentine

Next to the Six-Day War Hanoch Bortov was the most successful instrument of Israell public relations to make an impact on Britain in recent years.

Ae an omhassy attaché with a particular commitment to cultural relations, he supervised and directed a campaign of support for Israel of such effectiveness as would oarn for s diplomat of any other country models, honours, titles and a key position in the propagande arm of hts government.

But Barlov was and is a writer who left his typowriter to do a tour of duty. When it was over he roturned quiotly to his life-task of holping to make the hahol of Tel Ayly understandable to himsalf and othor Israolis.

Now ho writes a wookly column of political comment for Maarly, the hooks that won him the Shionsky Prize, and this charming quizzical momoir of his two years in

JEWISH CHRONICLE

SEPTEMBER 10, 1971-ELLUL 20, 5731

The threat from within

JUST OVER e week ego Mrs Meir warned against the very rest dangers of Internal division and dissension in Isrsel. The "real calastrophes," es she put it, "originate from within," and ehe struck et talk about two nations end two communities in Israel by pointing out that all laracije share a common

This week Mre Meir liss again drawn attention to the dangers of the internal situation, in particular to the chronic and crippling labour disputes which are causing sirikes. Very properly, the Prime Minister described the present situation es very grave. No doubt she was thinking in particular of the sirikes of customs officials and civit aviation workers which have caused chaos at Lydda airport. These strikes have a security aspect os well as an economic cause and content.

Tha psychological es well as economic reasons for the present internel troubles in Isreel are too well known to require detelled analysia. The long truce has turned peoples' mlnda away from contempletion of external dangers. Tha "heve nots" in the population have become increasingly aware of their needs, and avan relatively weilpald workers do not sea why thay should not eek for more. This is altogether natural, particulerly in a com-munity lika Isreel'e which has had to make so many secrifices in order to survivo at ail. The basic economic problem ls equelly palneble—lsreel has been consistently living beyond har means, essentially becouse she must bear a defence burden which is horrifyingly large and which threstens to become

Behind the economic problem lurks the equally disturbing social one, that of the "Oriental Jewish" community which tends to regard ltself as being treated as eecond-class citizens. The root problems of the Oriental Jews remain their lack of secondary education, their under-representation in positions of outhorily, their lower standards of housing. But hecsuse a problem still exists, it is often forgotten just how much has already been done to solve it.

There is no easy summing up of Israel'a internol problems. Mrs Meir's comparison of the Black Panthers with ldot-worshippers is not epposito-their activities are a gauge of underlying dis-content, even though they are a small group, Her condamnation of wildcat strikes, on the other hand, is totally justified. Israel simply cannot afford tham. Overall economic problems will remain immensely difficult to solve, for there is no quick and easy way out of tham. The situetion stresses, more obvlously than in the past, the need for peeco, but this doas not diminish Israel's security requirements for a moment, Perhaps the unhepplest feeture of a worrying situation is that devaluation will hit the poor the bardest leading to increased discontent. deet, leeding to increased discontent. Because of these immediate pressuree, thare is all the more need for advence long-term planning to be seen to be operaling. It will encourage unity in s community which is under desperately heavy strain and is st last beginning to show the effects of it.

Prevention

Wsrnings that the Palestine terrorists Intend to direct their operations against Isrseli diplomstic and other institutions ehroad cannot be disregsrded. The fsilmre of terrorist activity in the occupied aress, followed by liquidation of the private srmies in Jordsn, is forcing the terrorists, particularly their Communist voing, to find new outlets for their destructive urges. These are men whose failure to impose their will on their own countrymen or neighbours moves them to unlimited violenes outside. It is important thet the wider world should not wait for these outlaws to act, but should decide now not only how it will reect but also how it will forestall their outrages. In particular, it must be insisted that guilt be shared by those States which allow tham asylum. Nor should terrorists be ellowed to recoup prisoners by taking innocent hostoges. Those who deplore draconian measures to defend civilised norms must say how they would defend them, or what? Abovo ell, those who justify them shere their guilt.

Justice deferred

It is characteristic of Israel's constitutional arrangements that though the Chief Rabbinate exercises powerful sistutory authority over the lives of its citizens, no ordered legal framework has been established for the Institution after more than two decades of state-hood. Some time ego, the Prime Minister passed a draft Bill regulating the election of the Chief Rabbi to the legislative committee of the Knesset. But it has been held up there es e result of political horse-treding processes. The Netionel Religious Party is opposed to one of the committee cheirman's projects; a Bill to make heads of local authorities (e salarled appointment with considerable power) directly elected instead of being political nominees. Were this system to be introduced the NRP would lose most of the headshipe it

The dlary that Anne maintained throughout that two years of the family's concealment has become one of the classics of literature of this century and has made a shrine of the building at 263 Prinsengracht, thousands of tourists from all corners of the world paying visits of tribute each year.

No one should ever note through

No one should ever poss through Amsterdam without seeing the house, to recall the terrible evenls of the Second World War and, I would say, to gain inspiration from Anne's immortal and unflagging

e.*Alfrad Sherman replies: Professor Gluckman insists on the book's moratity but in a long lotter is spoperally unoble to impart its neture to us. If he cared to read through the Isroeli press he would find ampla informed accounts of the bargaining processes which produce party electoral tists at all levels, fram moshay council to Knesset.

Ample material was collected in the early and mid fifties by soolology somioars at the Hebraw Univarsity. They ware never published in full because thora are limits to the Isrsell readers' interest, even among speciolists.

A fortiori, the reading public for a book published in English could hordly expect greater datall and accumulation of trivite ragarding a lass than typical segment of Israeli life than interested Israelis themselves. Yet without comparison with the wider Israelt political and ascial framework, the study can have meant little to those who lack intimate knowledge of the Israeli scenie.

The heavy jargon'l quoto was not axceptional but typical. If Professor Gluckman wishes to criticise my own propa style I anggast that he first discover offending paragraphs rather than grainttously assert that they must exist Indeed, his "guilt by essertion" method confirms the suspicion that when the safealyled social scientists lack avidence they simply juvent it.

Think of the Sabbeth-how do we cclebrate It? Well, of course, wo go to synagogue on Shabbat morning and some of us go even on Friday night, but what many of us associate the Sabbath with is the levely meal we cat on Friday night: the two chalas, the chopped fiver, the tokshen soup, the reast chicken, whatever food they ilke as their Pipe.' main Rosh Hashanah meal, In some places a special polat ls made of eating fiah. This symboilses that the good deeds we do to the coming year should be as numberless as the fish in The meaf on Rosh Hashana is an important occasion, as on At the Roah Hashana meal all other Jewish feativats, since tha family ars all together, worelipping and cetebrating.
